

E-ISSN: 2962-973)

Publisher BT BAD I

PT. RADJA INTERCONTINENTAL PUBLISHING

WWW.JARUDA.ORG

"UNVEILING SHADOWS: A COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATION OF VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN IN INDIA AND METHODOLOGICAL CHALLENGES IN RESEARCH"

Shabir Ahmad Lone^{1*}, Irshad Ahmad Reshi², Shamweel Iqbal Dar³, Nadeem Akhtar⁴, Mohammad Ishaq Lone⁵

^{1*}Research Scholar, Department of History, Annamalai University, Annamalai Nagar-608002, Chidambaram, Tamilnadu, India

²Contractual Lecturer of Economics, Govt; Degree College, Nowshera, Jammu

³Research Scholar, Department of Sociology, Annamalai University, Annamalai Nagar-608002, Chidambaram, Tamilnadu, India

⁴Research Scholar of Tourism and Travel Management, Nirwan University Jaipur, Rajasthan, India

⁵Contractual Lecturer of Islamic Studies, Govt; Degree College Sogam, Kupwara-193302, Jammu and Kashmir

Correspondence Author: loneshabir714@gmail.com (7006808798)

Abstract

This research article delves into the persistent challenge of violence against women in India, examining its various forms and societal implications. It scrutinizes the ambiguity in defining such violence and the subsequent methodological challenges in research, particularly addressing the sensitive nature of the subject. The study highlights the complex interplay of factors contributing to increased reports of sexual violence against women, including patriarchy, education, and disparities in gendered power dynamics. Despite societal changes, the normalization of violence complicates the assessment of actual increases. The paper underscores the multifaceted nature of the issue, influenced by contextual factors, intermediate factors, and societal effects. The research proposes that attempts have been made to eliminate domestic violence, yet some programs demonstrate less success. The analysis emphasizes the interconnectedness of sexual harassment with broader economic, political, and cultural contexts. Despite women's increased confidence, the reluctance to report violence persists, attributed to the normalization of such incidents. The conclusion advocates for improved legislation to address the pervasive issue effectively. The research encounters challenges in defining violence and underlines the need for enhanced research efforts to better understand gender violence and design effective interventions.

Keywords; Gender-based violence, domestic violence, sexual harassment, societal norms, women's rights, India

INTRODUCTION:

Throughout history, violence against women has persisted as a societal challenge, occurring in times of peace and war. The term encompasses gender-based acts causing physical, sexual, or psychological harm, irrespective of age, race, culture, wealth, or geography. India, often portrayed as a rapidly growing economy with progressive human development indicators, faces a growing concern regarding increased sexual harassment, challenging initial definitions.

DEFINING VIOLENCE

The diversity in defining violence, whether broad or focused, holds significance as it shapes societal responses. The World Health Organization characterizes violence as the deliberate use of physical strength or power, real or threatened, resulting in harm to oneself, others, or society. Domestic violence, as per the 2005 Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, includes

"Unveiling Shadows: A Comprehensive Examination of Violence Against Women in India and Methodological Challenges in Research"

Shabir Ahmad Lone^{1*}, Irshad Ahmad Reshi², Shamweel Iqbal Dar³, Nadeem Akhtar⁴, Mohammad Ishaq Lone⁵ physical, sexual, verbal, emotional, and economic abuse within a common family. The legal implications of these definitions contribute to societal norms and expectations.

Various forms of violence against women were examined, all sharing a common purpose: gaining and maintaining control over the victim.

- 1. Physical Abuse: Intentional contact abuse causing intimidation, pain, or injury, encompassing actions like kicking, scratching, punching, choking, dragging, and burning.
- 2. Marital Rape: Involves coercion or intimidation for unwanted sexual activity, extending aggression and violence even within marital relationships.
- 3. Domestic Violence: Characterized by the misuse of power to control another within a relationship, encompassing physical assault, psychological abuse, social abuse, financial abuse, or sexual assault.
- 4. Rape: Pressuring someone into sexual activity against their will, including sexual contact with individuals with mental disabilities or unconscious persons, ranking as the fourth most commonly reported crime against women in India.
- 5. Prostitution: Prostituted women endure intimate partner abuse by pimps and clients, involving manipulation, control, economic exploitation, social alienation, verbal harassment, threats, intimidation, physical aggression, sexual assault, and captivity.

RESEARCH PROBLEM

The challenge in formulating effective and sustainable strategies to address violence against women lies in achieving a comprehensive understanding of all its dimensions. This necessitates the recognition of victims and offenders, understanding apparent risk and protective factors, delineating the specific consequences of abuse, and identifying the real needs of survivors. Equally crucial is the documentation of implemented responses to discern weaknesses in current approaches and distill potential lessons for the future. However, any endeavour to address violence must initially grapple with a set of methodological issues concerning ethics and health. This involves assessing a judicious combination of research methods and identifying instances of household abuse. The sensitivity of the subject poses a hurdle in obtaining candid opinions from participants, who fear that their responses may adversely affect their credibility and that of their families. Additionally, participants may inadvertently associate certain behaviours with their cultural context, potentially introducing biases into the research. Overcoming these methodological challenges is imperative for a nuanced and accurate understanding of the complex issue of violence against women.

HYPOTHESIS:

This research proposes that attempts have been undertaken to eliminate domestic violence and its related consequences. However, some programs have demonstrated less success. It is further suggested that knowledge about domestic violence issues can empower victims, enabling them to recognize their rights and contributing to a reduction in the overall prevalence of the problem.

METHODOLOGY:

The research paper relies on secondary sources, predominantly drawing from books and academic articles, to formulate a reasonably accurate opinion in support of the hypothesis. This study employs a comprehensive desk analysis, gathering data from current studies on sexual harassment against women in both domestic and public spaces.

RESULTS;

The findings highlight a complex interplay of factors contributing to the increased reports of sexual violence against women in India. Factors such as patriarchy, women's education and employment, and disparities in gendered power dynamics are identified as underlying reasons. These issues are perceived as being influenced by 'traditional' standards and ideals conflicting with the forces of 'modernity,' thereby contributing to violence.

E-ISSN: 2962-9733

WWW.JARUDA.ORG

Publisher PT. RADJA INTERCONTINENTAL PUBLISHING

Sexual violence against women is contextualized within a broader economic, political, and societal framework. The results indicate that despite efforts, violence persists in Indian society, and women exhibit limited awareness of laws and organizations addressing domestic violence. Across diverse cultures and times, a common thread is identified, emphasizing the enduring nature of certain aspects of humanity.

ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION:

Based on the findings, it is acknowledged that understanding sexual violence in India requires recognizing the dynamic interplay of forces at different community levels, influencing individual actions. Sexual harassment against women is situated within a broader context of the economy, politics, and culture, emphasizing the interconnectedness of these factors. Despite societal changes and the women's movement fostering increased confidence, the common perception of abuse being ingrained in women's daily lives persists. The reluctance of women to report violence is noted, attributed to a normalization of such incidents in Indian society. The normalization of violence complicates assessing actual increases, particularly considering factors like population growth.

Historically rooted gender roles and the expectation of women's obedience to husbands have contributed to a subordinate status. While changes have occurred post-women's movements in the 1970s, patriarchal norms still weaken, and evolving gender roles lead to confusion about new opportunities. Inadequate legal frameworks, exemplified by gaps in laws protecting women from violence, contribute to the persistence of sexual violence against women, challenging the notion of a straightforward relation to the modernization process. The analysis underscores the multifaceted nature of the issue, influenced by contextual factors, intermediate factors, and effects. Therefore, an exclusive focus on a single cause is deemed unlikely and simplistic.

CONCLUSION:

In conclusion, the prevalence of various forms of violence against women across socio-economic contexts in India is undeniable. While existing laws demonstrate efficiency in maintaining law and order, adapting to the changing socio-economic fabric requires enhancements in legal frameworks to align with modern times. The need for improved legislation is highlighted to address the complex and pervasive issue of violence against women effectively.

CHALLENGES FACED

- 1. Ambiguity: The study encounters challenges in defining violence against women, as there is uncertainty about what should be considered violence. Distinguishing between harmless appreciation and severe crimes poses a dilemma, as perceptions vary among individuals, making it difficult to establish clear boundaries.
- 2. Under-reporting: WHO reports indicate that less than 40 percent of abused women seek support, with a preference for approaching family and friends over established institutions like the police and health services. Additionally, less than 10 percent of women seeking help involve the police, contributing to a lack of comprehensive research and hindering recommendations to minimize or eliminate aggression.
- 3. Eve-Teasing Misrepresentation: The term 'eve-teasing' misleadingly portrays a milder form of violence as entertainment. This term, prevalent in novels, movies, and songs, downplays aggressive and harmful actions. The extent to which repetitive eve-teasing leads to more severe offenses, such as rape, remains unclear and undocumented.
- 4. Time-Consuming Research: Extensive pursuit of research objectives necessitates more time and fieldwork to interact with the populace, gather information on various cases, their types, intensity, and public perspectives on violence against women.
- 5. Inadequate Laws: Women's health policies and regulations are often ignored or inadequately enforced, deviating from international standards. Existing violence-related laws pose significant obstacles to achieving justice for women, necessitating reform and stricter enforcement.

Volumes 3 No. 3 (2024)

''Unveiling Shadows: A Comprehensive Examination of Violence Against Women in India and Methodological Challenges in Research''

Shabir Ahmad Lone^{1*}, Irshad Ahmad Reshi², Shamweel Iqbal Dar³, Nadeem Akhtar⁴, Mohammad Ishaq Lone⁵

6. Perpetrators from Close Circles: Recognized individuals, including neighbours or relatives, are identified as perpetrators. This highlights the vulnerability of women even among those they know well, emphasizing the need for safeguarding measures within close relationships.

INFERENCES

Violence against women is a substantial global health issue, often overlooked due to its taboo nature. Recent studies emphasize the pervasive nature of such violence, underscoring its role as a significant contributor to women's morbidity and mortality. The paper advocates for increased research efforts to enhance understanding of gender violence and design more effective interventions.

REFERENCES:

- 1. Al-Azad MAS, Raman Z, Ahmad M, Wahab MA, Ali M & Khalil MI. (2011). Socio-demographic characteristics of alleged sexual assault (rape) cases in Dhaka city. Journal of Armed Forces Medical College, Bangladesh,7(2), 21-4.
- 2. Alexander CS. (1980). The responsible victim: nurses' perceptions of victims of rape. Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 21(1), 22-33.
- 3. Azikiwe N, Wright J, Cheng T &D'Angelo LJ. (2005). Management of rape victims (regarding STD treatment and pregnancy prevention): do academic emergency departments practice what they preach? Journal of Adolescent Health, 36(5), 446-8.
- 4. Bachman R & Paternoster RA. (1993). Contemporary look at the effects of rape law reform: how far have we really come? The Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, 84(3), 554-74.
- 5. Baxi P. (2000). Rape, retribution, state. On whose bodies? Economic and Political Weekly, 35(14), 1-7.
- 6. Boyer L & Dalton ME. (1997). Female victims of rape and their genital injuries. BJOG. 104(5), 617-20.
- 7. Burt MR. (1980). Cultural myths and supports for rape. Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, 38(2), 217-30.
- 8. Caprioli, M. (2005). Primed for violence: the role of gender inequality in predicting internal conflict. International Studies Ouarterly; 49, 161-78.
- 9. Chandra M. (2012).Social profiling: the root causes of racial discrimination against NE.Paper presented at a UGC Sponsored National Seminar on Gender and Racial Discrimination: the Paradigm of Women's Vulnerability. Imphal, Manipur. Retrieved from: http://nehelpline.net/?p=702
- 10. Clay-Warner J & Burt CH. (2005).Rape reporting after reforms-have times really changed? Violence Against Women, 11(2), 150-76.
- 11. Cohen ML, Garofalo R, Boucher R & Seghorn T. (1971). The psychology of rapists. Seminars in Psychiatry, 3(3), 307-27.
- 12. Crime in India. New Delhi: National Crime Records Bureau; 2011 Retrieved from: http://ncrb.nic.in/
- 13. Dasgupta SD. (1996). Feminist consciousness in women centreed Hindi films. The Journal of Popular Culture, 30(1), 173-89.
- 14. axi P. (2000). Rape, retribution, state. On whose bodies? Economic and Political
- 15. Weekly, 35(14), 1-7.
- 16. Boyer L & Dalton ME. (1997), Female victims of rape and their genital injuries, BJOG.
- 17. 104(5), 617-20.
- 18. Burt MR. (1980). Cultural myths and supports for rape. Journal of Personality and
- 19. Social Psychology, 38(2), 217-30.
- 20. Caprioli, M. (2005). Primed for violence: the role of gender inequality in predicting
- 21. internal conflict. International Studies Quarterly; 49, 161-78.

E-ISSN: 2962-973)

Publisher

PT. RADJA INTERCONTINENTAL PUBLISHING

WWW.JARUDA.ORG

- 22. Chandra M. (2012). Social profiling: the root causes of racial discrimination against NE.
- 23. Paper presented at a UGC Sponsored National Seminar on Gender and RaciaChauhan, Neha. "How Gender-Based Violence in India Continues to Rise." YourStory.com, 17 Sept. 2019, yourstory.com/socialstory/2019/09/gender-violence-indiaArellano, Lisa, et al. Reconsidering Gender, Violence, and the State. Duke University Press, 2016."Violence against Women in India: Cases of Rape, Domestic..." behindthequest.com/documenting-violence-women-india-actionaid/.